

To the participants and guests of the International Forum 'Eurasian Educational Dialogue'

Dear colleagues,

The last decade has been marked by the value of sustainable development formed in the global community. Education which must comply with the new challenges is playing an increasingly important role in overcoming the crises in the economy, intercultural relations.

The answer to the current demands of society and the state is largely the transition to the new educational standards. Their peculiar feature is a clear definition of educational results to be achieved in the learning process. It is noteworthy that new educational outcomes are not limited to achievements in subjects; they ensure formation of personality of young people, their mastery of the most important metadisciplinary competences.

The new paradigm of educational results implies a substantial reconstruction of the system for assessing the quality of education. The key task of the education system must be to form effective management practices based on the assessment of educational results.

I am convinced that the platform of the International Forum 'Eurasian Educational Dialogue' will enable teachers, scientists and experts in the field of education both from the Russian Federation and abroad to discuss problems and identify future trends in education quality assessment.

I wish all the participants fruitful work, important tasks solution and constructive dialogue.

Dmitry Livanov

Minister of Education and Science of the Russian Federation
